

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT: MEDIA LITERACY AND CITIZENSHIP

90-Minute Interactive Workshop

In order to deliberate together as citizens about issues facing our communities and nation, we must be willing and able to critique news sources, and to seek information from a broad range of perspectives. This professional development session will give teachers the skills and knowledge needed to help students critically evaluate media messages. Teachers will leave with an enriched understanding of the media landscape, knowledge of key concepts in media literacy, and a set of activities that help students engage with a wide range of sources, read critically, apply media literacy to social and digital media, and identify active efforts to mislead.

Session Overview

Media Literacy in Context:

Emphasizing the importance of media literacy and its impact on real-world events is an essential part of utilizing media literacy skills effectively.

- Teachers will explore the connections between media, information literacy, and citizen engagement.
- A Close Up facilitator will guide teachers through resources to help students understand the relationship between media and politics.

Principles and Practices of Media Literacy Education:

There are key concepts that informed consumers of news and media intuitively rely on. This component will help teachers understand and articulate those ideas.

- Teachers will discuss eight major concepts in media literacy that can help students critically engage with news and social media.
- Teachers will receive concrete tools, tips, and activities to help develop students' media literacy and facilitate discussions about current controversial issues.

Integrating Media Literacy into Your Classroom:

Developing media literacy requires ongoing effort and practice; these lessons and resources will prepare teachers to engage students in this work.

- A Close Up facilitator will guide teachers through a model lesson on identifying reliable sources.
- Teachers will participate in a guided discussion to highlight areas of their curricular sequence in which media literacy instruction would enhance their learning goals.
