

CLOSE UP CIVIC FELLOWSHIP

2023-2024

Spend a year inspiring, empowering, and serving young people while building your own career!

You're a recent college graduate (or about to be one), dedicated to serving others and looking to build your skills and network in civic education, nonprofit work, or the realms of politics and policy. Join us for the Close Up Civic Fellowship, a life-changing year of engaging young people in the political process, breaking down the barriers of polarization, and making your mark as an aspiring educator, issue advocate, or nonprofit leader.

Who Are Civic Fellows?

Civic Fellows are energetic, recent college graduates with a passion for service, civic education, public policy, and government. Civic Fellows join the Close Up Foundation for a year-long term as we help high school and middle school students discover their own power as citizens.

What Do Civic Fellows Do?

As a Civic Fellow, you'll become part of Close Up's tightly knit team of civic educators, working together to serve young people of all backgrounds in a varied, fast-paced environment.

You'll have the opportunity to:

- Lead civic education programs in our nation's capital for diverse students from across the country, helping them discuss and debate the issues that matter to them.
- Meet and build relationships with elected officials, nonprofit leaders, and policy experts.
- Work closely with Close Up's partners, from Bank of America to the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute, to serve participants in special-focus youth summits, including those for Native American students, migrant and immigrant youth, and students working locally to engage their government.
- Lead students in explorations of historical cities up and down the east coast, including New York City, Philadelphia, Gettysburg, and Williamsburg.
- Participate in professional development sessions with skilled educators.
- Collaborate with Foundation leaders to improve civic learning outcomes for students across our programs and curriculum.

Most of the time, you'll be staffing multi-day civic education programs in Washington, DC, leading high school or middle school students through study visits to monuments and memorials, meetings with elected officials, and engaging simulations, discussions, and debates. Your work with students will provide you with the firsthand knowledge needed to assist in efforts to study and improve the civic learning outcomes of our work with diverse students.

Compensation, Benefits, and Experience
