

CLOSE UP CIVIC FELLOWSHIP

2023-2024

Spend a year inspiring, empowering, and serving young people while building your own career!

You're a recent college graduate (or about to be one), dedicated to serving others and looking to build your skills and network in civic education, nonprofit work, or the realms of politics and policy. Join us for the Close Up Civic Fellowship, a life-changing year of engaging young people in the political process, breaking down the barriers of polarization, and making your mark as an aspiring educator, issue advocate, or nonprofit leader.

Who Are Civic Fellows?

Civic Fellows are energetic, recent college graduates with a passion for service, civic education, public policy, and government. Civic Fellows join the Close Up Foundation for a year-long term as we help high school and middle school students discover their own power as citizens.

What Do Civic Fellows Do?

As a Civic Fellow, you'll become part of Close Up's tightly knit team of civic educators, working together to serve young people of all backgrounds in a varied, fast-paced environment.

You'll have the opportunity to:

- Lead civic education programs (in our nation's capital and the virtual space) for diverse students from across the country, helping them discuss and debate the issues that matter to them.
- Serve as a mentor and tutor for local students in community engagement programs.
- Meet and build relationships with elected officials, nonprofit leaders, and policy experts.
- Participate in professional development sessions with skilled educators, learning best practices and strategies to take with you after Close Up.
- Spearhead efforts to research, evaluate, and improve the efficacy of our work.

The duties of a Civic Fellow vary from week to week. Most weeks, you'll staff multi-day civic education programs in Washington, DC, leading students through study visits to memorials, meetings with elected officials, and engaging simulations, discussions, and debates. Other weeks, you'll tutor local students in writing, public speaking, and other civic engagement skills to address pandemic learning loss.
